BLAIR GIVES REASONS

Objects to Grand Trunk Pacific Bargain

(Special to the Bulletin.)
Ottawa, Ont., July 17.—Explorations of Hon. A. G. Blair's resignation were made today. The galleries were crowded. The premier read a short, careful statement that Hon. Mr. Blair resigned because he objected to the passing of the Intercolonial from Quebec to Montreal and also to the terms of the Grand Trunk Pacific bargain from Quebec to Winnipeg. Hon. Mr. Blair spoke at length. He had conducted the railway commission bill through its final stages at the request of the premier after his resignation had been offered. He found no fault with the criticism or amendment of the bill had received. He read his letter of resignation. In it he objected to the Quebec-Montreal line because it needlessly paralleled the Intercolonial. He counselled delay for further information on the route from Quebec to Winnipeg. He declared for government ownership of a line from Quebec to the Pacific or failing that, he favored a company owned line throughout with moderate aid and efficient control. He had not been consulted in the early stages of the negotiations and could not support the bargain as outlined. Otherwise he supported the government and its policy. There is no official announcement of the bargain yet made, but the premier said he would be presented shortly. There are no announcements of a successor to the minister of railways.

—Fuller details of the death from lightning of the three men near Morinville have come to hand. Two of them, Amelika Ward and Baptiste Beaulieu were halfbreeds living at Egg Lake. The third was an Indian named Lambert Courtois, from near Athabasca Landing. The other occupant of the tent, an old man, received only a slight shock.

FRIDAY, JULY 17TH, 1903.

The New Railway Act

July 16th, 1903.

Bulletin Correspondence.
Consideration of the Railway Commission bill was practically concluded in committee of the whole in the House of Commons yesterday. A number of important suggestions by private members, made from time to time during the progress of the bill, were adopted in whole or in part or formally rejected. Amongst these rejected was the proposition of W. H. McLean that passenger rates should be fixed at two cents a mile. This was opposed chiefly on the ground that the railways had to earn revenue from some source, and that it might be necessary to meet the reduction in passenger rates by an increase in freight rates.

In regard to responsibility of railway companies for the spread of fire an amendment moved by Mr. Demers was adopted, providing that in case of fire communicated by a railway to adjoining property, the company shall be responsible for the damage.

A provision was introduced at the request of the railway trainmen requiring the ladder on box cars to be placed on the side instead of on the end, as a measure of safety to the employees. The bill already contained provision compelling the use of automatic couplers and air brakes.

The increasing power of the railway companies and their dominating influence on all commercial and manufacturing interests makes the Railway Commission bill the most important legislative work of this session and indeed, of this parliament. It required not only the services of a man having an intimate knowledge of railway matters, but will more and more in thorough sympathy with the interests of the public as distinct from the special interests of the railway companies, and with the courage and ability to successfully maintain those interests against the enormous influence of the railway companies and the array of legal talent which they are always able to bring to bear in advocacy of their views. That Mr. Blair was the right man in the right place, the provisions of the bill as agreed to by the House of Commons is the fullest evidence. It is no disparagement to other members of the government to say that he was the only man in the government, or indeed in parliament, who both could and would establish the pre-eminence of public right as opposed to corporate interests in the railways of the country. While he has no been actuated in any degree by hostility to the railways, it will be found that there are radical changes in the respective positions of the railway companies and general public brought about by this bill. There was every inducement for him on the one hand to help the companies at the expense of the public, or, on the other, gain favor with the public by extreme regulations against the railways. So far as can be judged at this date his effort has been to hold the balance even and secure both in what are their absolute rights.

The original railway act was passed at a time when railways were looked upon as a sort of special providence, and when it was considered to be the part of true patriotism and in the best interests of the public to give them everything they asked for. From time to time afterwards as their operations widened and they came in contact with the public in still more various ways further legislation was given, always on the principle that whatever they wanted they should have. After this had gone on for many years it was only natural that abuses should have grown up and that a condition of affairs existed that was never contemplated in the first place and that was most injurious to the public interest. At the same time the abuses had been strengthened by use and justified by precedent to such a degree that when Mr. Blair entered the Liberal government in 1896, had he suggested the changes in railway legislation, which have now passed the House, practically without dissent he would have been considered at least a most dangerous radical. He did not take such action at that time, but from the moment of taking office he constantly kept in view the idea of maintaining the public as against corporate interests, and gradually from year to year pursued what may fairly be called a campaign of education, until parliament was ready to accept the provisions, which have now been adopted. It is true that public opinion has advanced rapidly in the same direction, and no doubt would have done so even had Mr. Blair's course been different. At the same time it must be recognized that his attitude had a beneficial influence on public opinion. Although of a decidedly combative temperament, which is not always held in control, it is still more to the minister's credit that he has been so successful in piloting such a complicated bill through the House, and although he was met by anything but fair or favorable criticism at many points the finish was the practically unanimous acceptance of the bill as completed by both sides of the House. This is a triumph of which the minister may well feel proud and on which the country is to be congratulated.

It would be a mistake to suppose that the provisions of this bill or their administration by the commission to be appointed under it, will revolutionize railway conditions. They are not intended to do so, but to improve those conditions and bring them up to the standard of modern requirements, establishing the dominance of public right as the end in view instead of the mere advantage of the railroad company which under previous conditions was the only consideration. Nor is it to be expected that the bill as it stands will meet all views or conditions now or hereafter. Both the country and the railway conditions are growing, and with that continued growth many changed conditions will arise which will require many amended regulations. It is in view of this unavoidable change of condition that the great advantage of the new regulations in establishing the plans of dominance of the public interest, and providing a means for maintaining that dominance through the appointment of the railway commission, is chiefly valuable.

SCHOOL BOARD MEETS

The trustees of the Edmonton Protestant public school held a meeting in the secretary's office Monday afternoon. Those present were Alex Taylor, K. A. McLeod, H. A. Gray, and Mr. Perriat.

The committee to secure extra rooms in the west end reported having secured the old Presbyterian church at $25 a month, which included ground space for the old school building. The report was adopted and a lease drawn up in accordance with the report.

Thirteen applications were received for positions on the public school staff. Miss A. Stevens, of Yorkton, was given one of the vacant positions at a salary of $900 per year, her engagement to be for the primary department. Miss Alice McKee was given another position on the staff at a salary of $600 per year.

The chairman and H. C. Taylor were appointed a committee to superintend the necessary repairs to the old Presbyterian church and the old school.

The following resolution was unanimously carried: That in the opinion of this board the time has come when physical instruction should be given to boys and girls, and that an advertisement for a drill instructor for the boys be placed in the local papers.

The meeting then adjourned.

STURGEON

The heavy rains of late have been of great benefit to the crops in this district.

The Presbyterians of Nampa are getting a fine organ for their church from the Bell Organ Company's offices, Winnipeg.

Mr. Harrold and sons have purchased from the J. I. Case Company, through their agents, Messrs. Heist and May, Edmonton, a complete traction engine and straw blower threshing outfit.

We are all pleased to see the government ditcher at work again after its long rest.

Through the supervision of our present road overseer, Mr. George Sutherland, our main roads have been greatly improved.

July 15th.

CONJURING CREEK

The weather has again settled. Prospects for a bountiful crop are very promising.

This year marks a new era for Conjugating Creek. The rush of settlers to the Creek and for fifteen or twenty miles west of here has been most remarkable.

Four or five years ago Conjugating Creek was very thinly settled, now it is thickly settled for miles all around, so that two post offices were secured, one for Conjugating Creek and one for Culmar, four miles north. A store was started, a blacksmith shop and more schools were built and three denominations hold services here. There are also several carpenters at the Creek. A Liberal association has been organized and is flourishing. The postmaster handles our real estate and, intending settlers would do well to communicate with him for improved farms or for any vacant lands. There is a Justice of the Peace and two land guides in the government employ. Improved farms are rapidly advancing in price. Conjugating Creek is situated five miles west of Leduc, and is noted for being so well adapted to mixed farming. Its wonderful deep, black, rich loam is covered with pea vines and vetches, a luxurious growth. The district is all settled by English speaking people, and for far west where it is well settled, and where still plenty of good homestead land is to be had. Mr. Douglas, of Leduc, has put in a branch store about ten miles west of here in the Cache Creek district, and a post office is also being secured. One or two schools have recently been built and land there is booming. About five miles south of the Conjugating Creek post office is situated Conjugating Lake, about half a mile wide and several miles long, which abounds with fish. The banks are very picturesque, and, having a sand and gravel bottom, the lake is good for bathing and for summer resort. To facilitate this there is talk of a hotel being erected there and everyone is well satisfied with the future prospects.

There was a large party given Thursday evening by Mr. and Mrs. Howard in opening their new residence. A very pleasant time was spent.

ROSS CREEK

Quite a number of people from this settlement attended the sports at Ross Creek on July 1st and report having had a very pleasant time.

The picnic here the third last, was not as anticipated. The day being very cloudy, only seventy persons attended. A table thirty-eight feet long was well filled with such things as would tempt anybody's appetite. After eating heartily, the boys had a game of baseball, although they had only sixteen players. A short program of singing and recitations was given.

The remainder of the afternoon was spent in rope jumping, foot races and games. Some of the young people went to R. Van Buskirk's in the evening, where they spent the "wee hours" dancing and singing.

The C. P. R. surveyors have been surveying in this settlement for nearly two weeks.

Grain is beginning to head.

Mr. Peter Logan is fencing in the whole of his homestead.

LEDUC

Record.

—F. R. Douglas and Wm. Hudson of Cass Creek were in town on business last Saturday.

—B. Horspool sold his residence to John Brown and Mr. Horspool intends to go out on his homestead, about thirty miles from Leduc.

Mr. Dewar has returned from Glengarry, Ontario, with his wife and family and will move out to his farm as soon as his stock and effects arrive.

L. Postal, of Conjugate Creek, has returned from the Vermilion, where he has been working with a survey party. He says there is no place in Leduc.

—A number of our townsmen will be sorry to learn that Mr. E. Garrow and family have gone to California, where they expect to reside, in hopes of improving Mrs. Garrow's poor health.

—The growth around here this year is wonderful. We have a sample of wheat, sown last fall on new breaking which measures fifty inches and is fully headed out.

—Traffic on the main street has been obstructed for a couple of days this week, owing to the removal of Mr. H. H. Hummer's jewelry store from its position next Gates and Clemens to his lot west of the barber shop.

—The Leland hotel had a very narrow escape from being burned to the ground on Tuesday night. A small blaze started in one of the bedrooms, from a candle which was used to light the guests to bed, owing to the gas being shut off. The damage done was very slight indeed, but caused quite a commotion.

We predict that before long Alberta's manufacturing industries will be doubled in numbers. With its numerous swift streams and extensive coal fields Alberta is naturally adapted for the development of factories. Those who believe that the west must always be a purely ranching and farming country will be astonished at the number of new factories that will start up. It is noticeable that eastern capitalists are heading this way, starting woolen mills and other industries in the west.

On Friday last a baseball match was played between Beaumont and Leduc, resulting in an easy victory for Leduc, the score being 34 to 12 in their favor. In the evening the Millet football team played Leduc a hard game, winning by a score of 2 to 1. After the football match, a ball was held in McColeman's Hall, which was well attended. The music was good and everyone appeared to enjoy themselves. A good substantial supper was served at midnight at Mrs. P. Earl's restaurant, when everyone did justice to the good things set before them.

All druggists will refund your money if you are not satisfied after using Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. It is everywhere admitted to be the most successful remedy in use for bowel complaints and the only one that never fails. It is pleasant, safe and reliable.
